

ANCIENT ART

Many Indian tribes were noted for their wood-carving, particularly for their totem poles. These carved cedar poles were originally corner posts for the Indian houses. Later the custom of erecting one large pole in front of the house was adopted. These totem poles were very colorful and often featured designs that were animal-like.

You can make a papier-mache mask of a design that might have been carved on a totem pole. Start by mixing a paste of one part flour to three parts water. Then dip newspaper strips into the paste and wrap them over half of a balloon, while leaving two holes for eyes.

Build up the basic mask surface until it's about a quarter of an inch thick. Then use a combination of cardboard, pipe cleaners and papier-mache to add animal-like features, such as bird beaks, funny eyebrows and decorative expression lines (see the example).

Let the mask completely dry. (This may take a week or even longer.)

Paint your mask in bright colors, and you're ready to go!

A Little Bit Of HUMOR

Sidney Snake: I'm glad I'm not poisonous:

Sherry Snake: Why?

Sidney Snake: Because I just bit my tongue.

Larry: Our dog is just like one of the family.

Barry: Really! Which one?

Ken: What position do you play on the football team?

Kerry: Oh, sort of crouched and bent over.

Tess: Why are you knitting three socks?

Bess: My son wrote me to tell me that he has grown a foot since he's been in the army.

Q: What did the bread dough say to the baker?

A: "It's nice to be kneaded."

Manny: Did you hear about the cow who got caught in the earthquake?

Danny: No, what about her?

Manny: She gave terrific milkshakes!
